News Flash* : Good News: Congress Turns Attention to Rehab Once Again

Lawmakers shoot for a full therapy cap repeal.

Looking for relief in recession? Therapy cap repeal is in the works again. Sen. John Ensign (R-Nev.) and Rep. Xavier Becerra (D-Calif.) recently introduced the Medicare Access to Rehabilitation Services Act (S 46/HR 43), which would repeal the Medicare Part B therapy caps.

"By introducing this legislation on the first day of the 111th Congress, our nation's leaders are sending a clear message that total repeal of the caps is the best long-term solution to ensuring that Medicare beneficiaries receive the rehabilitation services they need," said American Physical Therapy Association President R. Scott Ward, PT, PhD, who attended Congress' swearing-in ceremonies. "It's time to end the year-to-year fixes and pass legislation that fully protects beneficiaries."

"Every year in the Senate we debate this issue of therapy caps, and this year needs to be the last," Ensign said.

The therapy caps were originally adopted by Congress in the Balanced Budget Act of 1997. The caps require beneficiaries to pay 100 percent of the cost of rehab care once they exceed the caps, which are $1,840 for occupational therapy and $1,840 for physical therapy and speech combined in 2009.

Battle continues: Since 1997, Congress has acted -- often at the last minute -- by passing several moratoria and authorizing an exceptions process for rehab services above the caps. And the current therapy cap exceptions process will expire Dec. 31, 2009.

"Please contact your members of Congress and request that they become co-sponsors of this important legislation," the American Speech-Language Hearing Association urged members in an e-mail.

"Healthcare reform will be a big issue, but the therapy caps are still a problem," noted Christina Metzler, American Occupational Therapy Association chief public affairs officer.
