

Pain Management Coding Alert

Reader Question: Pain in the Neck? Use These ICD-10 Codes

Question: When a patient reports to the PM physician complaining of neck pain, what is the correct ICD-10 code for the patient?

Alabama Subscriber

Answer: If the provider arrives at no more specific diagnosis than neck pain, then you should report M54.2 (Cervicalgia) for most diagnoses of neck pain.

Exception: If the neck pain is related to cervical disc disorder, then you might choose one of the following codes, depending on encounter specifics:

- M50.0- - Cervical disc disorder with myelopathy
- M50.1- - Cervical disc disorder with radiculopathy
- M50.2- - Other cervical disc displacement
- M50.3- - Other cervical disc degeneration
- M50.8- - Other cervical disc disorders
- M50.9- - Cervical disc disorder, unspecified.
